

Chapter 16. The cornered fight (II)

Anson was breaking down one door after another and passing through corridors after corridors, but the passage just wouldn't have an end. An outsider would certainly conclude that this Security Force headquarter was more capable than just detecting and shielding the inside from telepathic strikes. It had its own telepathic force against malicious intrusion, just like that of the Headquarters for the LOFPAH. When the outside was having a fiery high tech assault and defense, a tenacious and deadly telepathic fight was raising curtain in the core of the Headquarters.

Anson soon knew that he was resisted and bluffed by a counter telepathic force. He instantly broke the falsified reality and all doors and corridors disappeared at once and another reality exposed. He was inside a big cave with granite formation and there was only a little path behind him, supposed to be where he came from. Anson didn't need to look back and he sensed another telepathic entity was approaching quickly from behind. He knew time was running out and he quickly dashed into the stones and disappeared. The huge spinning sphere that followed him was roaring loudly and waiting to crush anything that came for its master. Anson just concentrated to break the protective telepathic shield and his force pouring out from him like raging torrents. He paid no attention to the enemy behind. He was just too strong to see it as a threat? Or, he was just a puppet with no free will to protect one's self?

After purging out all fake realities, Anson appeared facing the final containment field of the core structure of HOSFWUS. A wall with gloomy metallic shine was in front of him. Anson's power just couldn't break it in one moment and he was trying his best, still not a trace of his power kept for the approaching enemy. He knew the grand spinning sphere had just been smashed.

If someone thought Clarks was too reckless to foresee Anson's movement and didn't know what he was doing, he really very much underestimated Security Force. Just rich material resource couldn't make an organization big and flourishing. Leadership, intelligence and vision were more important. Ellearto and Clarks had vigilance for their new friends and it was a common sense. Suspicion was human nature. Clarks was not the topnotch guy in the organization, but he knew it was unwise to 'host a wolf in one's house'.

Just after the battle in the cornfield, Ellearto didn't turn off the telepathic scanners and therefore he had collected the telepathic signatures of all the acquaintance. He was surprised to find out that everyone carried some sort of telepathic energy, except Vince and Anson. Kim's family had the same pattern and the signature was strong. It was expected. Fanies's scan showed a special pattern. Even Andy was found to carry some kind of telepathic energy. Clarks didn't think it was a very good idea to take so many people with telepathic energy into the camp, but at the same time he figured out it might just mean a good opportunity and he could take advantage of it.

There was no question that Vince and Anson were the planned infiltrators. The enemy had set them up for something or just in case. They were just too clean in the telepathic scan. The enemy was very brutal and so far he left no one alive and unhurt. Fanies was dying. Andy's two other fellow members, and the two guards sent to follow Andy to the cornfield just disappeared in thin air.

By now the fierce enemy would know that the Organization had possessed equipment to resist telepathy. Before this opponent obtained the details of the counter-telepathic technology, like the range of operation and its principle of operation, the Organization should act to eliminate the enemy and not just wait and defend. Enemy's thought was not far from this logic and he knew it was a real threat to his formidableness. He needed to destroy it. Clarks was going to provide his enemy that window to attack and set up a trap for him. This was a gamble, a big one, and the stake was enormous. It was this headquarters and Ellearto. A small piece of bait would not get the core force of the enemy.

Clarks remembered those videos and reports on those snipers attacking Andy. Those people were under telepathic control and therefore they lacked a free mind and could not make good judgment. A common sense also concluded that even they could get some power, it would certainly be just a fraction from the master controlling them. The anti-telepathic shield of the Headquarters should be able to handle that. Besides, the Kim's family would help. In Clarks's blueprint, Anson and Vince were never the targets. They were allowed to infiltrate in order to get the big fish behind them. But they weren't less dangerous because they were just too close to the heart of the organization, Ellearto.

Clarks' target was the military organization of the enemy. No matter how formidable the enemy master was, he just could not destroy a huge armed organization just by telepathy. He needed a might military and he had built it, or otherwise, even he could defeat Security Force or Lows Corporation, he would not be able to challenge a nation or the world. Clarks watched the attack committed by a column of this military in front of HLOFPAH. They were likely looking for Lows or more precisely the knowledge about the decoded human genome, known as the Real Life Code. They possessed terrible energy weapons and high tech camouflage outfits. Clarks decided to take down the core of this military quickly because very soon they would show no mercy to either Security Force or Lows Corporation, and the whole country as well if they eventually would do.

Both Clarks and Ellearto knew that the strife had started and they were careful enough to secretly relocate most non-essential personnel in HOSFWUS to other concealed places even before they arrived from the cornfield. This was why Andy and Sue found an almost empty facility, except with security guards and a small team of medical people. Ellearto and Clarks intended to get the lowest casualty if the ferocious conflict really took place here.

The anti-telepathic equipment of Security Force was a top secret and nobody really knew its capability. At first, Clarks wouldn't rely upon them. There was no way to test them. Then, gradually more info came in the reports from those special agents equipped with the telepathic scanners and shields. They now appreciated the effectiveness of the scanners and started to build up a database about telepathic activities and patterns in many areas of the world.

But a shield against the control of a free mind from telepathy was not sufficient in a fight. Telepathic masters could use their telepathic energy to control physical bodies to attack, such as 'starting' a roadside car to collide into his enemy. They could also use the energy to tamper attacks directed towards them, such as stopping the bullets fired against them. Clarks very well understood that his organization was weak compared to its hidden enemy. Even the special agents equipped with anti-telepathic equipment would not match the capability of a telepathic master. The remaining hope was that there would not be too many telepathic masters, especially those really powerful ones. This was quite a reality, indeed in the past.

The situation changed recently. In the past two months, reports about individuals with strong telepathic signature came in repeatedly. They appeared in almost every major city in different identities. Although these people hadn't done anything obvious using their power, the report had dragged Ellearto back into business from his half retirement. In the same time, the Dark Stone comet was closing by to the solar system, and it was one of the alarming sign that Lows depicted years ago for a chaos to come. Therefore, Ellearto had to assemble a meeting of all the founders of the previous Lows Corporation. Finding Lows was one of the consensuses and the only clue lied in HLOFPAH where Lows said he would conceal himself for advancing his telepathy. But their agents were surprised to find a squadron of offenders ahead of them. They not only possessed high tech camouflage and powerful weapon, but also telepathy. They had no choice but to yield and watch only. But, before the attackers defeated the high tech protection shield of HLOFPAH, Andy and Sue had already broken into HLOFPAH. It was apparent that not only Ellearto was looking for Andy, the mysterious offenders was searching for him too. The whereabouts of Lows was still a mystery.

After the fight in the cornfield, scientists of Security Force instantly recognized that the telepathic signature of the powerful telepathic offender was similar to that they found in recent reports around the world and also in the attack of HOSFWUS. Clarks alerted that it was no coincidence and there was a huge conspiracy and its target at least included Lows Corporation. Being a secret military patron of Lows Corporation, Security Force was not only involved, but was a center for the destruction. The enemy was no only strong, but also well prepared to defeat the whole Lows Corporation.

Security Force was a legal commercial corporation. Because of its business in worldwide security and its specific history, it had weapons of every kind. The Company had registered all weapons used by its operators and agents according to the laws of every country and had licenses to possess them. Government of most countries would not allow powerful assaulting weapons to be used by security companies and therefore Security Force hadn't put their effort to develop them. But the US government wouldn't buy this. When Security Force was still a part of Lows Corporation, which used to confront the US government, FBI had numerous times held court warrant to search offices and depots of Security Force for illegal weapons. But Lows was clever enough to do business legally and never broke a law and the US government had no way to charge the Corporation for anything. After the spin-off from Lows Corporation, the relationship between the US government and Security Force had improved and there was a few times that Pentagon had talked to Security Force for joint ventures of developing new generation of powerful assault weapons. Ellearo pleaded that the Corporation had no such expertise and was not interested too. Instead, he was generous enough to share the technology of defense weapons with Pentagon. The short distance anti-missile weaponry on Andy's big truck was in fact from Security Force. Ellearo aimed to mend relationship with the US government.

Clarks expected that the US government would interfere the attack of HOSFWUS if it really happened. After the attack of HLOFPAH in the east coast, the government would discover a terrible weapon being used against property on US soil and it should be inflaming. While in this occasion it was used against an opponent of the government, it could similarly be used to launch an attack against the US government, especially the White House. The US government would exercise their best tool to catch those militants too. But Clarks had a suspicious character and he had a few questions without a good answer. His gut feeling was that everything came in too quickly and forced them to make haste decisions. Second, he didn't think the US government was so poor in national security and was totally unaware of a huge group of militant deployed in the capital district and they could move into thin air in the country. However, time didn't allow him to think a lot. The fight already began.

Anson first fired. He was a puppet of the telepathic master in the cornfield battle. Anson's telepathic signature was concealed and because Clarks had foreseen the event, he tuned the telepathic scanner to work inside the building as well and so he was aware of Anson's every move. But Clarks was not able to contain Anson because he had underestimated Anson's destructive power. He was then confused by Anson's move inside the facility which at first had shown no purpose and direction at all. He didn't know that Anson was resisted by another kind of anti-telepathy protecting the facility.

Anson was restless and his power stretched out to ruin other places brutally. Clarks's control center was targeted. The bombardment could not break the telepathic shield as well as well as the structural integrity. Video coming in from different sections had shown the wide destruction of the facility and it really shocked Clarks. It was right to dislocate all most personnel away or otherwise Security Force would suffer a heavy casualty. Now it was the worry whether Anson could break down the anti-telepathic shield and structure containing the core of the facility, just before Clarks could finish up the main fight in this battle.

Anson's tyranny was only the prelude of the attack. At the same time, a brigade of militants equipped with camouflage outfit took siege of the buildings and they fired laser weapons at the launching helicopters that were leaving for Honduras. On the other side of the buildings, the helicopter bringing in the two senior masters of Kim's clan was landing and was also attacked by the militants. All helicopters of Security Force were equipped with anti-laser shields and reflectors and they were safe.

The landing floor quickly retracted into the ground and the helicopter instantly disappeared. The glaring laser lights had illuminated the dark surrounding and the quiet horizon was echoing waves of rumbles caused by the explosion of the missiles and laser beam. Numerous locations of the buildings had stretched out sheets of silvery parabolic reflectors to divert and diffuse laser beams and Security Force had their own laser that detonated incoming missiles. HOSFWUS was still well protected by high tech defensive tools. There were no clouds in the sky that night and from Satellites the fight would certainly be detected and reported. The offense and defense would be analyzed to the greatest detail by those who watched. There was no reason for the US Government not to send security force to interfere, though they might try to delay in order to test the defensive and offensive capability of Security Force. Clarks needed them and calculated not to allow the Government to take any excuses. He had arranged multiple ways to send alarm and distress calls to the US Government. He assumed the vigorous enemy could paralyze the communication network around the area. He really didn't expect to be able to talk to outside in a normal way once the battle started. It was almost certain that the enemy also had high tech capability.

The fierce attack only took a while and it then stopped. Silence and darkness retook the area. Clarks understood that this was just a short break before a big storm. The regular attack was just a test for Security Force and now the enemy very well knew that conventional weapons would not defeat the opponent. The next would certainly be detrimental. The clock ticked and everyone in the control room was squeezed by the intense atmosphere. They were still looking at the huge display showing the whole outside area in great clarity under a thermal scan, yet nothing was revealed. The enemy was damn good in concealing themselves. If it were not because some of them possessed telepathic signature and was detected by the high strength telepathic scanner, no other technical detective device could locate them. The enemy was still pausing. They were just waiting for the powerhouse of the facility to be destructed from inside, or they were just preparing the last pernicious strike.

Kim was fighting the sudden telepathic attack and he was exhausted. Once the helicopter landed into the interior of the building, the two senior masters quickly jumped down the plane and in the same time their telepathy had stretched out to help Kim. But the acute enemy had laid down trapping shields around Kim and the senior masters could not do anything in that distance. They knew Kim could fail in any moment and they quickly ran to the upper level. At this time, the attack outside was at its boiling point and the power of the building was mainly used to launch laser reflectors and detonate incoming missiles. The energy available to resist the offensive telepathy was reduced. The senior masters felt the oppression of the enemy's telepathy. When they got to the upper level, the lower level had also hit by Anson's power and a series of explosion took place to rumble the whole place. The helicopter had exploded. Smoke and hot current filled up every space. Telepathy had also wrinkled the space and time continuum and created illusion. No ordinary person could trespass the area. The two masters, however, were extraordinary, yet they still had to be very cautious in the search for Kim. They were opening a channel to reach Kim. At this moment, the outside attack subsided and the energy was back to the control of anti-telepathic utility. They helped suppress Anson's telepathy somehow. The two masters found the resistance weakened and they could instantly located Kim. Their communication didn't need words and quickly they worked together to break a channel in the telepathic domain. But suddenly, all the telepathy retreated and the physical environment recovered despite it was already greatly damaged. Everywhere was smoke and small fire. They found Kim puffing and exhausted. They looked at one another without knowing why suddenly the binding telepathy would suddenly disappear. Before they could figure out anything, they felt something even worse. They sensed a terrible energy being built up outside of the building. Kim gave a signal and led the way to dash into lower levels of the building. While he passed the places he came from, nothing appeared intact. The destruction was widespread and the path was only barely recognizable.

Outside HOSFWUS, a dozen of blue fireballs appeared from nowhere and quickly dashed towards the strong walls of the buildings. Clarks finally watched those fireballs again and this time hitting Security Force. The extraordinary thick concrete and steel wall was smashed instantly and they collapsed. Even the control room, which was in the very deep level, was shaken. He pushed two control knobs and then entered a secret code and then ordered a retreat. A door was opened and there was a shallow channel with bright illumination. Clarks was the last one to leave the control room and the light in the room dimmed down the first time since its operation. The huge display showed a count down clock for a self-destruction sequence. Lows Corporation would prefer death rather than living in disgrace, Security Force too.

The once impregnable fortress of Security Force was no longer there. There were only crumbling walls and dilapidated buildings. Everywhere was flames and smokes, and dusty plumes spread around. A dense fog happened to erupt this time from the surrounding woods and all these made the area look very wretched and forlorn. Suddenly, about a thousand militants in uniforms and carrying different equipment stepped out from nowhere and they stood rigidly, watching the corrupted Headquarters. They likely wanted to look at the masterpiece of destruction without concealment. But, strange things just happened. Only in seconds, those militants fell down to the ground one by one, even without a single yell. And, what followed was even astonishing. Another thousand men in black uniform and facial mask came out from the woods, quickly approached those fallen militants and they moved the bodies and equipment in a blink of time. Just in a minute, everything was gone, even the dense fog disappeared into thin air. Who had won this fight, or it was really a third party taking advantage of the two battling sides.

Shortly after the retreat of the second troop, sirens were heard from the far side and numerous military vehicles arrived quickly and dispatched a whole army of US soldiers. There were a dozens of military helicopters in the air too. Numerous spotlights were elected from above and on the ground. At this time, another series of explosive rumbles were heard from the underground and all the buildings corrupted this time and it lifted another plumes of smoke and dust. Fires were still burning.

When Clarks was leaving the control room, he knew that there were still people in the facility, including Vince, Kim, the two telepathic masters and some facility workers. He was sad to have no way to help them. Everywhere was demolished by Anson except a few places with very strong structural barrier and anti-telepathic shield. He still couldn't understand why Anson's power could be such formidable, after all he should only be a puppet. Events took place too quickly. Clarks 's sentiment was an uneasy one.

Anson was pumping up his telepathic power to neutralize the anit-telepathic shield of the core district of HOSFWUS.

"The auto destruction sequence has been launched, everything would be doomed. Striking the core is no longer meaningful." This was the voice of Vince.

Anson turned around and likely saw Vince behind him and protected in an invisible shield. The shield was resisting his fierce cascade of bombardment.

"Who're you?" Anson asked.

"I'm Vince, a friend."

"No, you aren't! You're him!" Anson cried.

"No, I'm Vince and I ain't him. I'm your friend. Anson, wake up! Wake up" Vince answered.

The call was soft and gentle and it could penetrate deeply into Anson's controlled and locked up mind.

When Anson first saw those bluish fireball weapons inside the main door of HLOFPAH, his psyche was greatly shocked and no one would understand. It was because this kind of weapon was once the targeted product in his research. Though his progress was not even close to a prototype, he had the exact idea of the kind of explosion of the weapon and its power.

Shortly after he enrolled in MIT, he joint the research group led by a renowned professor and studied a new science temporarily named as energy containment. As the name implied, it was a technical science trying to contain, accumulate and compress energy in a space. And, when the lock of the containment was unveiled, the energy was released.

If the technology succeeded, there would be many civil uses in a peaceful way. But, major investors were not interested in its peaceful usage. Their demand was a kind of conventional weapon, with enormous destructive power, but no radioactivity.

After the birthday party tragedy, Anson lost his capability in conducting researches because all his memories in the subject became vague and fragmented. He had consulted several psychiatrists, but all treatment was in vain and most of them just said it had to rely on time to wash away the sequela. Finally, Anson had to quit from his research and he and his mother were provided with new identities and arranged to stay in Andy's crisis unit. Gradually, Anson forgot all his knowledge in the subject.

He was shocked when he saw the bluish firewall weapon, but his mind was cleared up too. In an instance, not only all his memories came back, there were other images in his mind. After the fight at the energy station, he really had time to think about the whole matter and tried to assemble the images into understandable events. When he immersed deeply in his past, the telepathic entity slipped into his psyche and captured him.

The sentimental call from Vince was strong and it broke open the lock binding Anson. The free will of Anson resumed activity and began to resist the intrusive telepathy. When his mind was about free from the control, all the random images that he tried to assemble and explain suddenly and strangely arranged by their own and became rational. This was natural for the brain when it was free from manipulation, or it was just an incidental act of the brain when it was shocked in the right way, or it was just another wave of telepathic manipulation.

Anson had no idea about what caused him to reveal all the random images and long lost memories. The content of the events he revealed was more shocking than he saw the weapon based on his basic research, and he had no capacity to assess the validity. He was too startled and electrified. That was all he had in its mind. Anson had hurt numerous people in his life and these serious mistakes were not easy to seek pacification and to free one's straitened mind. Even with enormous effort, one usually just couldn't compensate merely because of lack of opportunity. The best Anson had done was to soothe his parents and turned responsible for his family. He had not really been keen to do a lot of good thing, either for those he had hurt or just for the community. The bottom line was that he did not really bear a passionate 'heart'. Without a graceful heart, you might just easily complain and even resent on wrong doings done to you. When you treated people badly, the same way other people could do to you. It was though difficult to tolerate or condone. It was difficult to purge ill intentions and to pacify rage.

Anson's psyche was conquered again in a different way by the embedded telepathy. The difference was that he thought he was sober and in charge of his free will. His mentality was reset to reveal everything that happened on that tragic day, every one of his beloved fell in the blood. He was able to see the murderers and even those conspirators who planned everything. Anson was pushed to madness and explosive rage. He threw all his available energy out for a vengeance, but in reality, he was just attacking his friend, Vince.

Vince and the telepathic shield protecting him disappeared in an instant. The real or physical Vince was not there. When Anson was striking out his last powerful assault, Kim and the senior masters had intruded into the segment. With the contact of the telepathy-filled space and its strength, the two masters had the same thought coming up to their mind, "Oh, it is the 'Little Will Force'". Instantly, Kim sensed the message and he unconsciously muttered, "This is the legendary 'Lillte Will Force'! It was recorded that Buddha had left this kind of power after his ascent and it had protected the early fragile Buddhist organization until the power finally evaporated.”

Anson’s astray mind turned sluggish because of exhaustion and he just couldn’t find Vince. But, he was still struggling to destroy the telepathic siege set by his opponent to contain him.

Kim was now close to the telepathic war zone, and in one instant, he felt Vince’s presence and his power.

“‘Little Will Force’ has chosen Vince to exercise the will!” Kim thought.

“The siege laid down by the power of ‘Little Will Force’ will be broken soon, but this puppet’s life force has almost dried up too and would become useless. He’ll die. At the moment the siege breaks, the mastering force controlling him will reorganize and redeploy. And, there would be a loophole of weakness. If the ‘Little Will Force’ is not exhausted, it’ll also pick that moment to attack. We’ll add our charge at the same moment and help eliminate this puppet and his master.” One of the masters noticed Kim.

“Anson will die!” Kim thought.

The bewildered telepathic reality was close to a break point, and the physical reality appeared. But, it was no clearer than the telepathic construct. The serious damage of the upper levels had deteriorated the physical structure of the lower levels and everywhere had dust in the air. The segment was going to collapse too. The safety lights were on and off intermittently, likely showing five vague figures in a narrow space.

“Is Vince really here? How? Is he really the one firing the ‘Little Will Force’? Who left this power behind?” Kim had a lot of questions, but time wouldn’t allow him to think because the intense fight hadn’t stopped for any moment.

Vince was the youngest guy in Anson’s crisis unit. He came from a small village in the heartland America. He had parents as well as sisters and brothers. He led an ordinary peaceful life and had a righteous belief. He joined the marine right after his high school and very soon was under Andy’s command. Andy was a righteous man with high moral standard and he took care of Vince like his little brother. Compared to Anson who had lived a life of debauchery, Vince was as pure as a piece of white paper. It would look difficult to control him to do very evil things. Back in the farm base, Vince was a good friend of Anson because both Vince and Fannies were asked to take care of Anson and his delirious mother when they first arrived.

Vince was not far from Anson, and he stretched his hands to grasp Anson’s wrist. Strength flew like electrical current into Anson’s body and his mind. It opened up every telepathic lock. Anson really woke up, in a sense that he had reflected his mistaken life. He instantly understood that life was just birth and death, nothing more. He lost all his physical strength, but he was awakened in his mind and he was now trapping up the telepathic entity inside him.

“He couldn’t leave me now! Together, we will be in hell!” Anson said to Vince in an ever peaceful accent. He then fell into Vince’s embrace.

At the same time, the unified attack from the two masters had launched, but it was not towards Anson. The enormous force swirled around to hit at Vince. Anson was dying, but he was aware of the sneak attack and he was still keen enough to use up his last bit of life force to push Vince away and neutralize the assault. The masters didn't stop and prepared the second strike, but Kim's had already quietly placed his palms onto their backs and poured his lethal telepathy into them. The masters fell and they succeeded to strike back at Kim. Kim fell. Suddenly, only Vince was still standing up.

Now, the self-destruction alarm started to alert an evacuation.

Epilog of Part One

The helicopters taking Ellearto and Andy were heading south after take off from the battlefield. Ellearto tried to communicate with the site, but he found that all channels were jammed or interfered heavily. Even the satellite signal was totally neutralized. It was a very bad situation because the communication system of Security Force couldn't be that easily tampered. Needless to say, the enemy had his own hostile satellites in the sky as well as transmission stations around. When they recalled the fierce attack by the time they left the place, everyone onboard was worrying about the people who remained in the facility. It was not uncertain whether HOSFWUS could resist and the defendants still alive. Everyone inside the helicopter was very silent and the atmosphere was very tense and stretched.

Finally, Ellearto said, in a calm and soberly tone, "Our enemy moved very quickly and he appeared to know quite well about our deployment. If we didn't have this unexpected trip to Honduras, we all were trapped inside too."

"Are they able to defend the place?" Sue asked. Her question was a direct one.

"Sue, you had been so close to those terrible bluish firewalls. You know their power and destruction far more than me. If the assaulting troop has the same identify as those who attacked HLOFPAH, I don't see we could resist."

"HOSFWUS does not have those high tech shields in HLOFPAH!" Andy said.

Ellearto explained, "Security Force and Lows Corporation had separated for almost ten years. More than that, the management, business model and R&D development diversified even earlier. Therefore, new technology of Lows Corporation couldn't be available to us. This is part of the intention of the separation. Even we have possessed such shield, the enemy fire would eventually neutralize it. Remember what it had done to HLOFPAH. The only chance is that we strike before them, but at this moment, we really don't have the weapon to do so. It is also not very wise to do that now. This is American soil, not a third world battlefield."

"Isn't it really passive? I bet that your Government would just be watching and do thing." Sue said.

"Although the corporate offices of both Lows Corporation and Security Force are not in US, their business is huge in this country. When our government isn't acting to protect lawful enterprises, there are only two reasons, one is we don't possess the capacity and second we don't want to. Right now, I believe the second reason is taking the weight. The US Government will see it a good opportunity for some one strong enough to challenge us. This will reveal the real capacity of Security Force as well as the attacking secret military and both sides would certainly be consumed." Andy added.

In these years in the farm, Andy had read more books. Without a military mentality, he could know the American politics better.

“The analysis is very correct. I even can say our Government wouldn’t hesitate to sacrifice us to expose the mysterious enemy. After all, they then will think whether it’s better to use them or to eliminate them. The question is that whether our Government really has the power and wisdom to deal with this mysterious militia. They have mighty firepower, high tech and telepathy. We just don’t know their number and their base. Of course, I wouldn’t preclude that our Government could have better info about them.” Ellearto agreed and supplemented.

“Security Force wouldn’t just sit here and wait for its doom!” Andy asked.

Ellearto didn’t put down an obverse answer. He just explained, “Don’t forget, Security Force is only a huge enterprise. We are really not a country or nation. We don’t have our sovereign land or a base. We also depend on individual governments of the locale to protect the people and asset of the company. In the real world, because of our type of business, we always contend with criminal syndicates and deal with some terrorist organization. We even can use investment and loans to influence the policy of under developing countries. But now, we’re talking about a militia who is likely powerful and ready to challenge the US. It’s not our capacity to fight with them without great sacrifice. All we can do at this moment is to retreat our resources and to reduce the damage to the minimum. Now, we start to appreciate Lows’s vision when he wanted to move the corporate from US to other places. He felt growing pressure of the government day by day and he just didn’t want to be clamped up on this soil.”

Ellearto paused and continued, “HOSFWUS has relocated most personnel away secretly even before we arrived there from the cornfield. It has an underground tunnel system that can go to other places including Mexico. Our original plan includes meeting the two senior telepathic masters from Dr. Kim’s clan. We liked to seek for their advice to deal with the telepathy of our enemy and act accordingly. But the enemy militia came too quickly and their speed just compromised our preparation. I couldn’t know what is going to happen. “ He then looked at Andy and continued, “One more thing is that Anson and Vince are still controlled by telepathy and we’re sorry to find no way to help them”

Andy was silent for a moment and said, “In fact, I have the same feeling about they are being under the telepathic influence. Lastly, I discussed with Sue and had to leave then behind. I am the one who should be blamed for not taking good care of my men.”

“Now, I understand that you are really the one this militia is after.” Sue said to Ellearto.

“At first, I think they are after us. Now, it is very clear that you are their real intention.” Andy looked at Ellearto and agreed.

“It is right. Lows Corporation is what they want. They chased after you because you had entered HLOFPAH with us and they could only find you. In the cornfield, the enemy penetrated into your mind and he knew he could get nothing important from you. Therefore, he retreated or otherwise we wouldn’t get away easily. My guess is that they still had no idea where Mr. Ellearto is right now”

Little Guy said, but he was interrupted by a sudden entry of a chief assistant of Ellearto. His countenance was very pale and everyone in the room perceived that something bad had happened. This assistant walked quickly to Ellearto's side and said a few words to him. Ellearto's unpleasant complexion instantly turned even more unsightly. Everyone stared at him and waited for him to announce the tragic fall of HOSFWUS.

Ellearto didn't say a thing. Instead, he turned on the TV in the cabin. An ordinary commercial channel was repeating an emergent broadcast:

"... believed that the assassination and subversion was a very careful plan implemented in exact delicacy. At this stage, the Government couldn't know the real enemy behind the plot and act. But the plan was executed through Security Force, the biggest security company in State and in the world. The assassination was committed by four senior representatives of Security Force. The company executives had taken advantage of the recent terrorist activities in the vicinity of the capital to arrange a secret meeting with the Vice President Hawkins in the White House and a joint anti-terrorist exercise in the capital area. The four representatives of Security Force carried no weapon into the conference room, but in the meeting they suddenly attacked the Vice President and the bodyguards with heavyweight fist. They were all killed in the syndrome of heart failure. The four murderers then took the firearms from the bodyguards and sneaked out of the room and turned to the President's office, where they encountered armed guards and they exchanged heavy fires. President Gales was struck by gunfire while he was leaving his office and died instantly. According to Constitution, Speaker of the House, Bufokes, took oath to succeed the presidency. President Bufokes immediately declared an emergency for the country and declared marital law for nine major cities under attack. These cities are Washington, DC, New York, Baltimore, Philadelphia, Boston, San Francisco, San Diego, Dallas and Chicago. Justice Department had also issued warrant for the shut down of all Security Force offices in the whole country and the arrest of CEO of Security Force, J.B. Ellearto, and the other six senior executives....

Ellearto then turned to an English channel in Europe.

"The assassination of the President and Vice President of United State in this morning had shocked the whole world. After two hours of the initial broadcast, the situation was still very unclear and appeared chaotic. The Government had used emergent channels to broadcast the same content repeatedly without giving further details. Many cities of US....."
